

First Nations people would use every part of the buffalo. This meant pelts for clothing and shelter, bones for tools, and the meat for food.