

This image shows a couple of very cool older models of cameras. People weren't always able to take a photo in a matter of seconds like we can today. In the very beginning it was a long process that required those who were going to be in the picture to be very still for several minutes. Camera technology has advanced quite a lot since its invention in 1816. The Clareholm and District Museum has a wonderful display of some of these cameras within our photo booth.
