

This kerosene lamp is much like the one used by train conductors to communicate with trains and check the grounds in foggy weather and at night. Kerosene lamps were also used by people before electricity and simple switch on lights were made available.